Cotton Hill Records Local Author for National Public Radio Program

(Albany, NY) Cotton Hill Studios, Inc. recently utilized its ISDN technology to connect with The Kojo Nnamdi Show. The show airs on WAMU 88.3 a public radio station serving the Washington DC area. Local Albany Law School professor and author Timothy Lytton worked with Cotton Hill's president Ray Rettig to broadcast his commentary for the one-hour live radio show.

"With ISDN technology, it's possible to have local experts contribute to national radio programs all over the country sounding like everyone is in the same location," Rettig said. "Being one of the only ISDN-capable studios in the area, Cotton Hill is able to accommodate both national and international clients," Rettig said.
